CHRISTMAS MISHAP—Lt. Alphonse Sheppard of Bay St. Louis Fire Department examines the inside of a Volkswagen bus which caught fire recently while its owners, Dennis and Lisa France, were traveling down Washington Street in The Bay. Wholesaler speculated a backfire through a cigarette with no air filter ignited the vehicle. The Bay Fire Department responded and put the fire out. Nobody was injured. The vehicle's engine and interior were heavily damaged in the incident. (Staff photo by Brent Macey)

More arrests expected

Arson squad tightens net around offenders

By BRENT MACEY

Although the vast majority of woods fires in Hancock County are still caused by arson, the county's arson squad is beginning to tighten its net around offenders who currently are still at large.

Four people have already been arrested this week on misdemeanor arson charges. A fifth was convicted.

Ed Friloux, Hancock County Arson Squad investigator, noted 75 percent of all woods fires in Hancock County can be attributed to arson.

Each year, thousands of acres are burned by fires.

In this month alone fire departments responded to more than 100 fires reported, Friloux said. The majority were woods fires.

William Lawrence, a dispatcher from Rocky Hill Fire Tower in northern Hancock, reported 40 woods fires which the Forestry Commission responded to in that section of the county. That number does not include fires which county volunteer fire departments were called to battle.

"There were more than that last month," Lawrence said.

Since its creation two years ago, the arson squad has accumulated much data on fires and suspected arsonists.

"It's a matter of putting information and facts together, there will be more arson arrests," Friloux said.

Included in possible future arrests is an arsonist currently suspected of starting four woods fires in Diamondhead last week—one every day at 2 p.m.

Another arsonist who may be arrested is suspected of lighting a woods fire in the Devils Swamp two weeks ago. That fire burned for three days before a heavy rain doused the flames.

Friloux has suspects for other fires in the county also.

"I know who is starting some of the fires," he said. "But right now I just can't quite nail them."

The penalty for arson is linked directly to the type of offense.

Arson can be either a misdemeanor or a felony, Friloux explained.

The difference is determined by how a fire is started.

"A person who accidentally loses control of a fire set on his property which then sweeps on to a neighbor's property can be guilty of a misdemeanor arson."

That offense is punishable by a $20 to $50 fine, three months in the county jail, or both, he said.

"A person who deliberately starts a fire which damages another's property faces felony arson charges," Friloux said.

That offense is punishable by $1,000 to $5,000 fine, one to five years in the state penitentiary, and not more than two years or both.

"Arson of a structure is always a felony," he said, and noted that offense carries the strictest penalties including a possible 20 years in state prison.

Because of the seriousness of the offense, rewards are offered to anyone providing information leading to the arrest and conviction of an arsonist.

The Mississippi State Forestry Association offers a $500 reward for information leading to arrest and conviction of woods arsonists, Friloux said.

The State of Mississippi offers up to $1,000 reward through the Insurance Commission Office for information leading to arrest and conviction of a structure fire arsonist.

In addition, the International Mobile Home Association offers $500 reward to anyone providing information leading to the arrest and conviction of a mobile home arsonist, he said.

Friloux attributed the increase in arrests and additional suspects to the numbers of people in Hancock who are coming forward with information about arsonists.

"I think people are just beginning to realize we are here," he said.

The Hancock County Arson Squad is the only county arson squad in Mississippi.

The squad was established two years ago by Sheriff Ronald Peterson, apparently because he had the foresight to see there was a need for it, Friloux said.

Jay Marsh, county fire marshal, was appointed chief arson investigator at that time. Friloux and the late Kenneth Fayard were appointed investigators.

Friloux noted Fayard's position has been vacant, leaving only two investigators.

He requested all people with information about possible arson to call his number, 467-1314 at the Diamondhead Fire Department or the Sheriff's Department at 467-5101 or 467-5277.

Kiln firefighter hurt in Rocky Hill blaze

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

A Kiln Volunteer Fire Department firefighter was injured Wednesday night while battling a blaze which destroyed a Rocky Hill Community home.

Bill Callahan, department pump operator, Saturday confirmed that Gene Ramsey of the Silver Creek area suffered a "deep laceration" along the entire length of his left hand middle finger when a brick wall of the home fell on him.

Ramsey was treated and released from Hancock General Hospital in Bay St. Louis. The injury required several stitches, Callahan reported.

The pump operator noted that Ramsey might have sustained more serious injuries if he had not been wearing protective firefighting gear. Callahan said cause of a fire which completely destroyed the brick residence of Marion Howell near Dedeaux Road is not yet known.

He said the department received a report of the blaze from a neighbor at about 10:30 p.m., but when units arrived at the scene the residence was engulfed in flames.

Callahan noted that a metal working shop adjoining the residence was also destroyed in the fire.

"All we could do was contain the fire to keep it from igniting surrounding sheds and nearby trailer," he stated.

The pump operator said the Diamondhead Fire Department water truck trucked water to battle the blaze which was extinguished some two hours after units arrived at the scene.

Callahan said Howell was home at the time of the blaze, but he was not injured.

The Hancock County Arson Squad is the only county arson squad in Mississippi.

Woman's condition poor after pickup hits bridge

By BRENT MACEY

A former Pass Christian resident injured in an automobile accident Monday night was listed in poor condition Saturday at Gulfport Memorial Hospital.

While at the hospital's intensive care unit, waiting room on Christmas Eve, Bill Norman, brother of injured Sandra Norman, 22, of Pearl River said his sister was unconscious and doctors told him every day she remained alive increased chances of her survival.

Upon transfer from Hancock General Hospital in Hancock County Tuesday, Norman was conscious until she underwent surgery to stop internal bleeding and to extract a tooth from her nose, her brother said.

Her ankle and foot are badly broken and she was strapped to a breathing machine, he said.

He reported his sister fell asleep while driving to visit her father in Kiln. Norman was critically injured when her car struck an abutment on a bridge spanning Bayou Tallon Hwy. 603 just south of Kiln.

Ed Friloux, fire safety administrator of the Diamondhead Fire Department, noted Norman hit the abutment head on and knocked a 50 pound block of cement off the bridge.

An intensive effort by numerous law enforcement officials and 12 medical people at the scene managed to sustain Norman's life until she could be transferred to Hancock General.

But before work could even begin, workers had to secure the car to prevent it rolling down an embankment, Friloux said.

He noted intravenous feeding was required at the scene as Norman's blood pressured dipped dangerously low.

"It took an hour and ten minutes to free her from the car, and that was with the jaws of life," he said.

"We practically had to dismantle the car to get her out," he said.

"A brake pedal was lodged in her thigh and the car had to be stripped before the jaws could be placed in position to cut the stem of the pedal so she could be removed."

Friloux noted some 25 bystanders with "morbid curiosity" gathered at the scene and hindered the efforts of officials attempting to free Norman from her small compact pickup truck.

"Some of the bystanders were members of county volunteer fire departments who were not called to the scene," he said.

The next time this happens, these people will be arrested, Friloux stated.

He noted that county fire departments were not called to the scene because the accident occurred on a private road and not on a public highway.

Michael Cox, who was directed to the scene by a private citizen, said he saw the accident and called the police.

Hancock County Sheriff's Office could not find the car until it was located on the private road.

Electrical short sparks Caesar residence blaze

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

An electrical wiring short is cited as cause of a Tuesday night fire which completely destroyed the home of a Caesar Community family.

Ed Eriloux of the Hancock County Arson Investigation Squad Thursday reported that the wood-frame residence of Barbara Bilbo and her two children, which was located just north of the Caesar Palace Crossroads, burned to the ground.

"The woman had driven her son to a Cub Scout meeting and had taken her daughter with them. When the family returned home, they found the house fully involved in flames," Eriloux explained.

"We thought there was a possibility the fire was caused by arson, but our investigation revealed that an electrical short in the little girl's bedroom caused the blaze," he stated.

Eriloux says the $30,000 home is a complete loss.

Also responding to the blaze were units of the Mount Olive, McNeal and Carrier Volunteer Fire Departments, and the Hancock and Pearl River County Sheriff's Departments.

Washington report

By CONGRESSMAN TRENT LOTT
5th District, Mississippi

SUMMING UP THE CONGRESS IN 1981

When the membership of the 97th Congress gathered in Washington at the beginning of the year, there was little doubt which issue would dominate discussion.

After all, the country's economic situation had been the focal point of the presidential and congressional campaigns in 1980. The intensive coverage given to various suggestions for digging us out of a real economic mess would have to generate some action, or there would be disappointment.

With inflation, high interest rates and the high cost of living in general listed at the top of the people's worries, it was time for action. And, not long after Congress convened, we started to move in the direction of decisions I hope will ultimately lead to full economic recovery.

As I look back on the year, and remember all of the doubts expressed by some liberal Members of Congress that Congress could act at all to solve economic problems, it is interesting to note major actions that have been taken. For example:

Significant inroads were made into slowing the rate of growth of the federal budget. Congress and the President demonstrated a commitment to fight inflation by bringing the budget under control.

There were some sticky periods, such as the one day when government agencies were directed to great down because the President had vetoed a bill to continue spending. The net result of that, however, was a $4 billion reduction in the amount of spending as Congress and the President agreed on a new funding measure.

Congress passed the largest tax cut in American history, an "across-the-board" tax cut for all Americans totaling 25 percent over the next three years. Business tax cuts were also approved to stimulate productivity.

Other beneficial changes were made in the tax code, including creation of all-savers certificates, expanding the Individual Retirement Accounts for wider availability, and reforming the estate tax laws.

A variety of other actions are being taken in the area of regulatory reform which will help reduce the cost of government. Also important is the fact that crucial spending for national defense, social security and some other programs has been protected.

All of our economic problems have not been solved, not by a long shot. But, the rate of inflation is down, interest rates are down, productivity as measured by output per hour is up, and the Gross National Product is up. Unfortunately, the unemployment rate is also up and we must deal with that quickly.

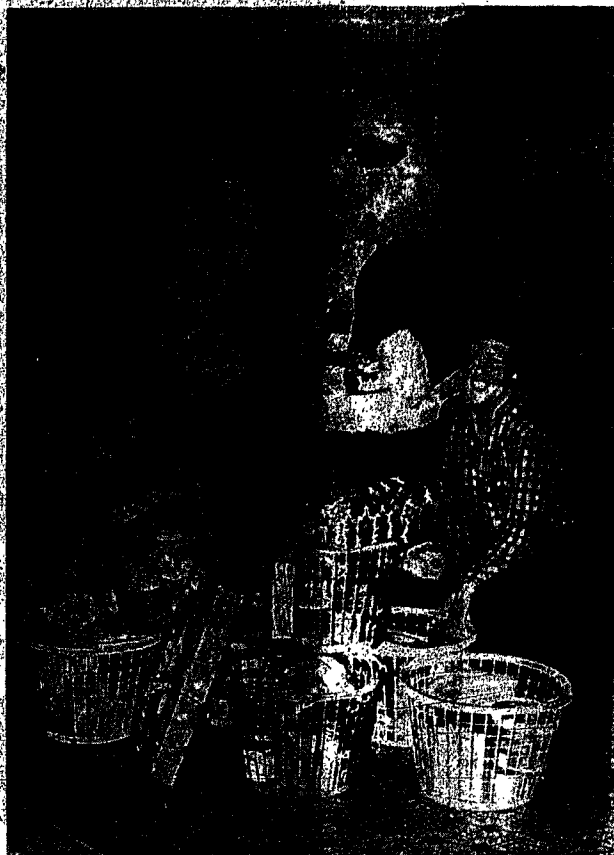

The road to economic recovery on which we are now moving is a long one and we won't reach our destination overnight. Many important decisions remain to be made before we reach our goal of economic stability.

Still, the activities of the First Session of the 97th Congress show a marked improvement over recent years.

SPECIAL REPORT:

Jobs and Training

Job placement and vocational training should be addressed as soon as Congress reconvenes in January.

The authorization for two federal programs, the Vocational Education Act and the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA), expires next year.

Although the President's economic recovery program is designed to stimulate the private sector to produce more jobs, we should not forget the important role government also plays as a facilitator, to bet- ter enable private industry to meet this challenge.

In Mississippi, for example, the vocational division of the State Department of Education administers the CETA-Vocational training program, primarily through our excellent junior college system.

These programs seek to provide a comprehensive curriculum with the major focus on skilled, occupational training in a field where there are reasonable expectations of employment in the private sector.

This type of comprehensive training, which includes personal growth and development of positive attitudes, is essential for participants to accomplish their goals and gain unsubsidized employment in private industry.

As a result of the joint cooperation of state and federal agencies, many Mississippians have gained good jobs, becoming productive and responsible citizens of our state.

These programs have played a critical role in the identification of job opportunities and the training, education and other services which have historically enabled individuals to secure and retain private employment at their maximum potential.

Such services are essential to full development of our nation's human resources, and I hope Congress will not undo the important work which both have accomplished.

We should, however, seriously consider changes which would improve the effectiveness of vocational education programs and employment services, within the constraints of the budget for 1983.

As the economy begins to recover from the recession next year, there will be increased availability of jobs— jobs that should be created by a growing, expanding private sector.

It is obvious that the availability of a trained, competent labor force will be a primary factor in any industry's incentive for expansion.

This country needs a coordinated and effective, functioning employment and training policy to aid and accelerate economic recovery.

We must thoroughly examine already-existing programs such as the Employment Service and Vocational Education, and plan for using the resources which they have developed and are now in place.

The failure to come up with an effective policy and program for increasing job opportunities and matching well-trained, persons with private sector employment will result in continued high unemployment, greater pressure on welfare programs, and stagnant industries that lack skilled labor.

I believe we can achieve the goals of workable and cost-efficient training and placement programs but a determined effort must be made to define a sensitive and imaginative approach at the earliest possible date.

Lower doctor bills possible, says AMA

Like all other living expenses, the price of medical care continues to rise. But there are still a number of ways families can stretch their health care dollars. The American Medical Association offers these tips.

Have a family doctor. He will keep a permanent record of your medical history which may save duplicating many expensive and time-consuming tests.

Don't wait too long. Many people try to save money on medical bills by not seeing the doctor until they are seriously ill. This not only defeats the purpose of preventive medicine, but it is more expensive in the long run.

Have regular checkups. If you are past 35, a complete health evaluation every one to three years is a good idea. Early detection obviously offers a better chance to control and cure disease.

Go to the doctor's office. House calls are more expensive and less efficient than office visits.

Use the telephone. A family doctor who has examined you regularly is familiar with your health history. He can sometimes advise you over the telephone about minor health problems.

Follow your doctor's orders. If you refuse to follow the expert advice you, solicit and pay for, you are throwing your money away.

Buy health insurance. Today, more than 163 million Americans are protected by some form of private health insurance. It is a bargain considering the shattering effects that prolonged illness can have on family finances.

Check your eligibility for Medicare. For persons over age 65, the Medicare program provides protection against the cost of illness.

If you are approaching age 65, check with your local Social Security Administration office for assistance in enrolling in this program.

CONSUMER REPORT

A Service of the Consumer Protection Division of the Office of Bill Allain, Attorney General
P.O. Box 220, Jackson, MS 39205 (601-354-7130)

TRANSIENT VENDORS
Municipalities throughout Mississippi have recently experienced a tremendous influx of "out-of-state" transient vendors.

Transient vendors or traveling merchants have always been a part of our commerce. However, because of the nature of this type of business many unscrupulous operators and con artists have infiltrated the ranks.

Consumers may find that products offered at bargain prices may in fact turn out to be no bargain after all. A primary consideration should be the warranty offered in connection with the sale of the merchandise.

Most established businesses will honor your warranty if the product is defective.

Many transient vendors offer a factory warranty, which places the burden on the purchaser to return the item to the manufacturer who, in many cases, will be located in Taiwan, Japan, China or other foreign countries.

This kind of warranty is virtually worthless, as it would not be monetarily feasible to ship the defective item abroad. If the transient vendor offers a personal warranty, he is sometimes extremely difficult, if not impossible, to locate.

The state law requires that a transient vendor from "out-of-state" purchase a Transient Vendors' License from the tax collector in the county where he conducts business.

The cost of this license is $25 for one year.

The vendor who purchases such a license may come into that particular county on several occasions during the time that his license is valid.

Also, transient vendors are required by law to register with the State Tax Commission and pay their share of retail sales tax.

In many cases, the State Tax Commission is not aware that the vendor is conducting business within its jurisdiction; therefore, the vendor sells his wares, leaves the state and never contributes any revenue to the community.

Unless the transient vendor complies with all state statutes and city ordinances, his conduct constitutes a flagrant abuse of the local established merchants who pay taxes.

Episcopal students participating in talent identification program

Four seventh grade students at Coast Episcopal High School have been accepted to participate in the Talent Identification Program sponsored by Duke University.

This program seeks to identify seventh grade students who have excellent reasoning ability verbally, mathematically or generally.

Coast Episcopal students competing are Lizette Giles, daughter of Mrs. Helene Giles of Pass Christian and Dr. Thomas Giles of New Orleans; Holly Hunt, daughter of Elden Hunt of Pass Christian; Margaret Murdock, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Murdock of Gulfport; and Parker Deen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Inmond Deen of Pass Christian.

These students will complete the College Board's Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) on the Nationwide Administration in January.

Students participating in this talent search program will receive an appraisal of their verbal reasoning, mathematical reasoning, and English composition abilities in relation to the able seventh graders in the Talent Identification Program.

The high school students who complete the SAT will receive a score report from the College Board. The students who score in the top 10 percent of the group will be invited to the Grand Awards Ceremony at Duke University, where they will receive a prize and a scholarship from the College Board.

The students who score in the top 10 percent of the group will also receive a letter of recommendation from the College Board to the Duke University admissions office.

Play is a child's work; toys are a child's tools

Growing Child

Play is a child's work. Toys are a child's tools. And having the right toy is like having the right tool: it makes the job a lot easier and much more satisfying.

This is the philosophy that guides the selection of toys, books, and records offered in the Growing Child Store, a monthly mail order catalog produced by the Growing Child organization in Lafayette, Indiana.

The Growing Child concept is that every child needs certain specific developmental experiences early in life in order to develop the skills and abilities needed to be successful in school and later life.

But good developmental experiences do not just happen. Parents can do things, and fairly simple things, to make sure their child has the right experiences at the right time. Some of these things are playing simple games, loving and cuddling, personal interaction.

Another is providing good, age-appropriate developmentally challenging learning tools.

In the first year of life, a child's physical development starts at the head and gradually moves outward and downward. Good toy selection can strengthen and deepen this normal development process.

For instance, in the first few months, a baby is emerging from nearly continuous sleep. If there are enough interesting things to look at and stimulating things to listen to, the baby will remain alert more and use his eyes and ears.

The more he looks and listens, the more skillfully he will use his developing senses. Growing Child recommends unbreakable mirrors, rattles, bright pictures and mobiles for this age child.

Then at four to six months old, a baby is able to participate more actively in the world. Head, neck, and shoulder muscles have become strong enough that baby can now sit up (with support) and see things from a different perspective. Growing Child recommends toys to touch, squeeze, grasp, pull, push, and handle in many different ways.

From the seventh to the ninth month, babies go through a tremendous spurt in motor activities. This is the best time for playing with safe household items, and Growing Child recommends these and other items that can be easily improvised. Good toys for this age do two things: they invite hand explorations and tempt the baby to move along the floor.

The development pattern is clear. The first few months the eyes and ears were developing. Then the neck and arms, then the trunk and hands.

As the child approaches his first birthday, the major areas of development move out to the legs and fingers. So Growing Child recommends toys for the one-year-old that encourage finger control and suggest clearing the floor for that momentous milestone of walking.

Following, Child has a long and exciting period of all playthings before they go into the toy box.

The age-appropriate toys are safe and durable. They are made of wood, plastic, or metal. They are designed to be used in many different ways. They are designed to be used in many different ways.

Children learn by doing, not by watching. So Growing Child's toys do nothing in themselves. It takes a child's imagination, action, and involvement to bring them to life.

—Each toy must serve a purpose.

Each plaything contributes something to one or more kinds of development: physical competence, finger control, visual perception, and other necessary preschool skills.

—The toy must be simple and versatile.

This encourages children to use their imaginations.

—The toy must be attractive to look at.

Gaudy, cheaply-made and badly designed toys have no place in a child's life. An appreciation of beauty begins in the crib.

—And, finally, a toy must be fun.

Because a child certainly doesn't get any benefit from a toy he doesn't play with.

Growing Child, the original child development newsletter, has been published for 10 years. It has a circulation of 100,000. It is available for a monthly subscription.

Trivia Test Courtesy Of "The World's Telephones"

Attention, trivia buffs. What city in Canada has the number of telephones? What country receives the highest telephones to people per person? What is the longest long distance telephone call? Montreal, Calgary or Vancouver? Leningrad, USSR, Marseilles, France or San Francisco, Ca? What is the longest telephone call from people in the United States? Edmonton? Which city has the largest telephone exchange? The answers to these questions are: Toronto, Canada; the USSR; Montreal, Canada; Montreal, Canada; and New York, New York.

questions and everything you always wanted to know but couldn't think of to ask about telephones can be found in "The World's Telephones", published annually by AT&T's Long Lines Department.

The recently released encyclopedia of telephone facts contains 17 statistical tables that provide data on frequently asked questions. For example, how many telephones do people in the United States have (A: 175,506,000)? It also answers infrequently asked questions. For example, how many telephones does Bophuthatswana have (A: 5,757)?

The grey-bound, soft-cover book also contains a glossary of telephone phrases used throughout the tables and a narrative description of an international telephone number plan.

"The World's Telephones" is a valuable resource for those interested in researching international calling patterns, finding information on private branch exchange

(PBX) telephones or public telephones, and comparing business and residence customer lines and telephones.

The book is available through South Central Bell offices for educators, students, business people and even trivia buffs who want to stump their fellow trivia competitors.

By the way, the country that receives the most long distance calls from the United States is Great Britain.

The Canadian city with the highest telephones to people ratio is Calgary. Interestingly, there is an average of 87.6 telephones per 100 people in Calgary, compared to an average of 77.5 telephones per 100 people in culturally renowned Montreal.

Finally, although it's the least populous of the three cities, San Francisco has more telephones than either Marseilles or Leningrad, even though the Soviet city exceeds the Golden Gate city in population by more than three and a half million.

Kindergarten, preschoolers make theatrical debut at First Presbyterian Church in Bay Preschoolers and kindergarten students at the First Presbyterian Church in Ulman Avenue in Bay St. Louis recently performed "Christmas Windows," the story of a poor orphaned girl abandoned on city streets before Christmas.

The play, played by Hailey Bilbo, wanders aimlessly throughout most of the play looking for a family kind and loving enough to take her in. The child finds greatest contentment by looking inside windows at other children and activities in the community. Each window she views is a play unto itself.

Scenes unfolding behind the windows include activities in a toy store, a church choir, a children's party, a rich family, and a poor family.

At each window the little girl is rejected, and even a passing choir tells the little girl to go away because she sings too harshly.

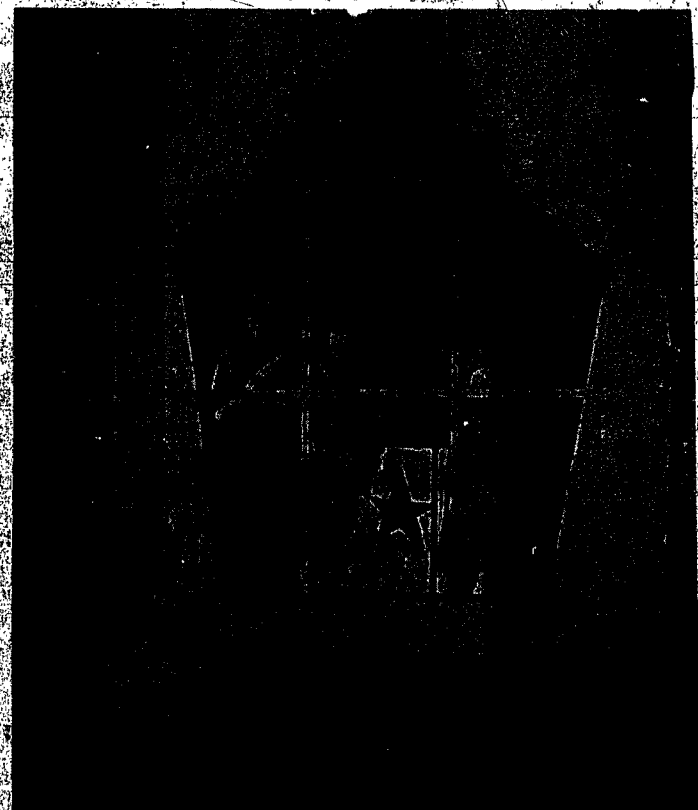

But in the end the poor family accepts the orphan as one of their own and the play, of course, ends happily.

Retired Coast Guard commander sees need for trained navigators

When ancient sailors left the relative safety of coastal waters, they undoubtedly relied on the stars and planets as navigational aids.

Unlimited quantities of pure, soft water result from rainfall

Unlimited quantities of pure soft water is one of the biggest assets, if not the biggest, we have in this section of the country.

Most of us here do not appreciate this fact as we have never had to conserve and scrimp on the use of water as people have to do in many places.

Because it is so plentiful here it is hard for us to understand the great hardships suffered in some sections where water is scarce.

Dorothy Hobson wrote a verse titled "Comprehension" which quote:

"None except those who walk in night
Learn the significance of light.
As only they who thirst can savor
Clear water's delicate fresh flavor."

And youth is known but to the old;
Only those lost in arctic cold
Sense fire's full meaning;
and those only
Can know what love is, who are lonely."

Our great abundance of water comes from the greatest rainfall, with two exceptions, in the whole United States, from ever running clear, sandy bottom streams from free flowing springs, artesian and shallow wells.

S. W. Green, former director of the McNellie Experiment Station for many years is authority for the statement that the weather station there showed the greatest rainfall over 23 years from 1908 to 1929 of any other station in the USA except off

Puget Sound on the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Green said further: "Total annual rainfall is very important for all growing crops including tree crops. However, the equal distribution through all the 12 months is most important for grazing and for growing crops, and Mississippi is particularly fortunate on this monthly distribution throughout the years."

The low months are October and November but these months show above 3 inches each average.

The average rainfall over a 23 year period at McNellie was 63.11 inches, with an average per month of 5.26 inches. The biggest average for any one month was 7.34 inches for July and the lowest was 3.26 inches for November.

"Absolute extremes of temperature at McNellie over the same 23 year period were recorded as follows: maximum 103 degrees F in 1909, 1924, 1925 and 1927; minimum 12 degrees in 1924."

"We have the most equable climate in the United States right here; no extremes of heat or cold."

Many winters we have gone through the whole winter with temperature low of 22 to 23 degrees F, while in the summer it is rare that we have higher than 93 to 95 degrees F. Over this same 23 years period the average maximum temperature was 88 degrees F while the average minimum was 49 degrees F."

Yes, highly important among our many blessings in this section is the unlimited quantity of pure soft water.

In many parts of the country streams are muddy and unattractive, water is difficult to get, while here we have unlimited quantities of the purest soft water on earth.

Many who live here do not really appreciate the great asset we have in our water. I have often stopped and walked along the banks of these clear, ever running, white sand bottom streams.

They flow along peacefully, contentedly, crystal clear in their jewel-like, sand-paved beds, blessing all who come to them, man and animal alike. The forest blends above these winding ribbons of water, forming a living arch of green to keep these streams cool and inviting.

It has on numerous occasions been my privilege to drive around over this section with visitors from other places. Many times I have seen these visitors exclaim and marvel at the beauty of these small streams, like the Holochochitto, Catahoula and others.

Once in driving north of Picayune a man from California had me stop the car on the bridge over the Holochochitto just north of Picayune.

He enthused over the beauty of this stream. He asked how many months a year it was dry and if there were fish in it. When told that it never ran dry but always carried a good volume of water and that fish abounded in it all the time, it was almost incredible to him as the streams where he came from are dry a big part of the time.

He said to me, "If you could swap places here but we pay move that stream to California, it would bring millions of dollars. We do not appreciate the common place things about us though many of them are of great value."
